Dolphin Sans was born out of my obsession with reverse stress typefaces. As the name suggests, the genre involves various reversals of stroke angles and contrast, resulting in idiosyncratic and unique typefaces that have often challenged visual norms and reading experiences. Dolphin is specifically inspired by Roger Excoffon's iconic Antique Olive and it's predecessor, FF Balance by Evert Bloemsma. The idea here was to interpret an on-going typographic experiment in my own way, to see what I can bring to an experiment performed by many other designers. Reverse stress types are often shunned as comical cowboy fonts but Dolphin tries to interpret the style for a wider use, at the same time not becoming too neutral.

REPORT: LEGAL BARRIERS PREVENT WOMEN'S EMPOWERMENT IN MORE THAN 170 COUNTRIES

Guardian Femblog

Congressional Record

Twenty years after the historic Beijing conference on women's empowerment, more than 170 countries still have legal barriers in place preventing women from experiencing the same rights, protections and liberties as men and boys, according to a new report on trends in gender equality around the world. The World Policy Analysis Center at UCLA's Fielding school of Public Health also found that more than 150 countries lacked protections needed to ensure women's full participation in the economy, with only 64 countries constitutionally guaranteeing protection against discrimination at work or equal pay for equal work. The report contains a series of policy briefs that examined trends and legislation in 197 countries and signatories to the Beijing platform for action, which then envisioned gender equality in all dimensions of life. The briefs were released at the start of the UN Commission on the Status of Women in New York. "Despite the health, economic and ethical motivations for achieving gender equality, women and girls continue to have access to fewer opportunities than men and boys around the world. Closing the gender gap still remains one of our greatest challenges," the report has said. "Too many girls still face early marriage or barriers to postprimary education. Too many women lack the economic resources that could lift them from poverty, protect them from the violence, and safeguard their own and their children's health... These persistent inequalities
